

CIVIS

A European Civic University

CIVIS short-term mobility course

Urban archaeology in the 21st century

6 - 10 June 2021

Aix-Marseille Université

University of Athens

Stockholm University

Apply by 18 Dec

Content of the course

Urban archaeology in the 21st century is a blended-learning programme that consists of classes, on-site instruction, a student workshop, and lectures that will take place in Athens.

Programme:

The Course offers insights and instruction on urban archaeology, that is an investigation of the material past of ancient towns and cities, with special reference to the particularities, interdisciplinary nature, and everyday challenges of fieldwork in contemporary urban environments.

The Course will consist of three days of classes, a day-long student workshop, and a half day of student presentations. Evening lectures and on-site activities will also be included.

Conditions of application

The course is open to Bachelor, Master, and doctoral students of archaeology and neighbouring subjects.

Applicants are invited to send their CV and a cover letter indicating their motivation to attend the Student Week in Urban Archaeology 2021.

BA and MA students also need a reference from a supervisor; doctoral students should send a short outline of their research project (1,000 words).

All application material should be sent to athenswk@arch.uoa.gr.

Non-CIVIS students (BA, MA, and PhD) may also apply, subject to a €300 fee covering all tuition and ECTS certificate. The application deadline for non-CIVIS applicants is 31 March 2021.

Interested in our short-term mobility courses?
Learn more at civis.eu/en

